How much longer will it be 'Always Sunny'?

Gang behind Philly's favorite black comedy talks about 'slim chance' Season 7 would be last ◗ They shot a two-part finale just in case ◗ Did scenes on Jewelers Row last Thursday ◗ Then there's story of Fat Mac

RICARD LARMA/METRO

▶ Crews for the television show dominated Jewelers Row for a couple hours and the cast gave Metro their take on Philly.

The "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia" gang is stuck in traffic. Dennis is driving, Fat Mac rides shotgun and Charlie, Dee and Frank are in the Range Rover's backseat. They're running excruciatingly late to see the movie "Thunder Gun," which Frank blames on "immigrants coming out of the woodwork for Obama." So, they all sprint out of the car, leaving Dennis behind.

This is how dozens of Philadelphians on the Jeweler's Row set last week got their first glimpse of hometown boy Rob McElhenney looking some 50 pounds heavier in pursuit of laughs for the comedy series of which Philadelphia has taken ownership.

On a filming break, the cast made the case that this season will be their best, with an episode at the shore, not as a homage to the MTV series because "they get too much attention already," said Glenn Howerton, aka Dennis, but as a nod to the shore's place in Philadelphia lore.

The cast is currently negotiating for an additional two or three seasons "but since there's a slim possibility this could be our last year, we filmed a great two-part season finale," Howerton said.

McElhenney wasn't talking end times, though. Asked what he'd like to tell the city of which he's painted a downright depraved image. "Thank you for embracing us and the show, letting us shut down streets and really be a major disruption."

"Thank you for embracing us and the show, letting us shut down streets and really be a major disruption."
MCELHENNEY

Fat Mac time

Even though a full beard and flowing yellow Hawaiian shirt (fine, borderline moo moo) masked the fruits of his labors, McElhenney has indeed packed on an estimated 50 pounds. The network embargoed press pictures before the season debut, but he explained the process of working with a nutritionist to develop a 5,000 healthy-calories-a-day diet.

"It was punishing," he said, with Howerton chiming in with "nearly debilitating. Character development? He just thought Fat Mac would be funnier than Ripped Mac.

What they said

The cast spoke about their adoptive homeland inside Tang's Jewelry on Sansom Street last Thursday:

Charlie Day (Charlie): "It's the best accent in the United States," he said of city speak before he and co-star Kaitlin Olson pronounced water as "wooder." They once considered having the characters speak in local dialect but found it too difficult to master.

Rob McElhenney (Mac): He said this season features "12 and a half" episodes, the half being a flashback to an earlier show into which his weight-gain is written.

Kaitlin Olson (Sweet Dee): She and Philly-native husband McElhenney had a son, Axel Lee, last September. Asked how it's changed her, she said "I find myself trying to make the baby laugh," not always an easy task. She finds people approaching the cast as if they're lifelong friends.

Glenn Howerton (Dennis): He agreed that he could find someone to match up with each of the show's depraved characters within walking distance "except Frank," turning toward Danny DeVito, who'd fallen asleep in a chair during the break.

Danny DeVito (Frank): "I wish we could shoot more here. Love working with these guys. What nobody else is doing [in television], they're trying to do it. All about pushing limits. It's been the best four years of my life."

Young mob scares N. Broad

NORTH PHILADELPHIA. Police received several reports of large groups of youths assaulting people on Broad Street last night, but it is unclear if the attacks can be classified as the work of an organized flash mob.

Police confirmed that a 27-year-old female was assaulted and robbed by a group of young men around 9:30 p.m. at Broad and Green streets. A 20-year-old man was assaulted around the same time five blocks away.

The crowd apparently traveled down Broad to South Street, where witnesses reported them throwing cans and lighting fireworks. METRO/AW

Firefighter's sudden death just 'so baffling' to friends

But one old friend who served with Slivinski in Marine Corps says calendar brouhaha hurt him Others say he always had smile on face

KATHERINE KOSTREVA

▶ Slivinski

John "Jack" Slivinski Jr., whose controversial pose for a yet-to-be released national calendar got him suspended for a short time in April, was found dead in his Northeast Philadelphia home Saturday morning.

Slivinski, 31, was high-spirited and "had a very commanding presence" whenever he walked into a room, according to Katherine Kostreva, the photographer who shot Slivinski for the charity calendar called "Nation's Bravest: Firefighters Unite."

"I'm just mourning the loss of a friend. I wish I could have known him longer," Kostreva said, adding that he will only be included in the calendar with his family's consent.

Slivinski, whose father works at Ladder 20 on Frankford Avenue, was allowed to return to work a short time after the controversy to his tour on PFD's Rescue One, a prestigious unit. He leaves behind a wife. Commissioner Lloyd Ayers called his death a loss for the entire department.

"There were no outward signs," said Local 22 President Bill Gault. "We never saw the guy not smiling. It's so baffling."

'Hit him hard'

Kate Rizzo, who met Slivinski in the Marine Corps' Delayed Entry Program and served with him at Camp Pendleton from 1998 to 1999, said she never noticed mental problems in the past, but the flap hit hard.

"I know this whole thing hit him pretty hard, with the calender," Rizzo said. "I think that really pushed him over the edge." METRO

Credit Card Debt?

Solutions that can help you get out of debt.

Tom Hill
CGA STAFF WRITER

Every three minutes another person falls behind on credit card debt. It's no wonder, since every major credit card company has nearly doubled the minimum monthly payment on consumers' bills. Federal Regulators forced the change because of their concern about the growing mountain of consumer debt, which stands at $2.17 trillion. Many consumers can only pay the minimum payment, which can take up to 30 years to pay off. Now, relief is in sight for millions of Americans.

Graffiti in S. Philly has national links

Mexican drug trafficking group uses 'MS-13' tags now seen on some walls Experts say it could mean big trouble or wannabes DOJ report found increase in Mexican drug trafficking groups in Philadelphia region

The markings began appearing early this month, scrawled across walls up and down Ninth Street in South Philadelphia. MS-13, a brutal street gang that originated in El Salvador and has grown into one of the largest Hispanic criminal organizations in the United States, seemed to be marking its territory.

"As fast as they paint over the graffiti, it comes back," said a neighbor who did not want to be identified for fear of retaliation. "I've lived here for a long time and haven't seen anything like it."

Philly gangs block-based

"I don't take the tags seriously," said 42-year-old Black Medley, who has lived in the area since 1979 and sees no other sign of the gang's presence.

METRO/AW

POST YOUR COMMENTS: WWW.METRO.US/PHL

If graffiti is the newspaper of the streets, as the popular law enforcement maxim goes, what story does the MS-13 tags tell?

"A lot of times, gangs will adopt the name of a gang that has gained notoriety," said Lt. Raj Ramnarace of the Gang Resistance Education and Training Program. "They heard about MS-13 through media reports and said, 'Hey, we're going to garner a little more respect."

The graffiti comes in the wake of 2010 census results showing a spike in the Hispanic population of South Philadelphia and a Department of Justice study that reports an increase in Philadelphia-based Mexican drug trafficking organizations.

"Even if your MS-13 set isn't recognized [nationally], the very fact that they are tagging the streets tells me they believe themselves to be MS-13 and that is all that matters," cautioned Sgt. Paul Hestekind, who specializes in gang behavior at Wisconsin's Department of Corrections.

Train crash death toll rising

At least six killed in weekend incident after tractor-trailer runs into locomotive ◗ Truck driver, train conductor among dead ◗ Toll likely to rise, but train cars 'dangerously unstable'

At least six people were killed when a tractor-trailer rig barreled through railroad gates and into an Amtrak train early Friday in Nevada, and authorities said yesterday they expect that number to rise as victims are pulled from the horrific wreckage.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokesman said the driver of the truck slammed on his brakes just 320 feet before the rail crossing, apparently failing to see signs, flashing lights and closed signal arms.

"The data so far indicates that all signals and gates were operating properly [and] there was excellent visibility of the track," said NTSB member Earl Weener.

The truck, leading a convoy of three tractor-trailer rigs, was traveling at such a high rate of speed that it embedded itself in the side of the train, Weener said.

Among those killed in the collision at a crossing of U.S. Route 95 near the town of Lovelock, about 70 miles east of Reno, were the truck driver and train conductor, the Nevada Highway Patrol has said.

The Associated Press reported that the truck company involved in the deadly crash has been cited repeatedly by state authorities for crashes, unsafe driving and operating a truck with tires so bald the vehicle had to be taken off the road.

Authorities expect to pull more bodies from the twisted wreckage of the train, but a search was proceeding slowly because the burned-out train cars were dangerous. "We know that people have seen bodies, but we can't get to them in the wreckage," a Nevada Highway Patrol spokesman said. REUTERS

Injured

- Renown Regional Medical Center in Reno received nine people from the accident, including one who remained in critical condition Saturday. A second patient was listed in serious condition and a third in fair condition. Six others had been discharged.
- Another 60 people were taken to Banner Churchill Community Hospital in Fallon.

'Lean gene' maybe not so great?

LONDON. Being slim may not always lead to a lower risk of heart disease and diabetes, scientists said yesterday after they identified a gene linked both to having a lean body and to a higher risk of metabolic diseases.

Researchers from Britain's Medical Research Council Epidemiology Unit said that while a so-called "lean gene" was linked to having less body fat, it was also linked to an increased risk of heart disease and type 2 diabetes — illnesses normally associated with being overweight. REUTERS

Vote offered to remove Gaddafi

TRIPOLI. The Libyan government yesterday renewed its offer to hold a vote on whether Muammar Gaddafi should stay in power, a proposal unlikely to interest his opponents but which could widen differences inside NATO.

Pressure is growing from some quarters within the alliance to find a political solution, three months into a military campaign which is costing NATO members billions of dollars, has killed civilians and has so far failed to topple Gaddafi. REUTERS

AIDS drugs tied to early aging

LONDON. A class of generic AIDS drugs often used to treat HIV in Africa and other poor regions can cause premature aging and lead to age-related illnesses such as heart disease and dementia, scientists said yesterday.

In a study in the journal Nature Genetics, British researchers found that the drugs, known as nucleoside analog reverse-transcriptase inhibitors, or NRTIs, damage DNA in the patient's mitochondria — the "batteries" that power cells.

The scientists said it was unlikely that newer cocktails of AIDS drugs would inflict similar levels of damage, since they are thought to be less toxic to mitochondria. REUTERS

Bachmann tests power of Tea Party

Conservative firebrand Michele Bachmann will test the limits of how far a favorite of the Tea Party movement can go when she formally launches her campaign for the 2012 Republican presidential nomination today.

The Minnesota congresswoman, who vows to cut spending, shrink the government and repeal President Barack Obama's 2010 health care overhaul law, may well pull the Republican campaign toward the right in her bid for an upset victory.

After months of flirting with a run, Bachmann, 55, enters the Republican campaign with an event in her hometown of Waterloo, Iowa. The Midwestern state holds the first contest on the road to her party's nomination for the right to challenge Obama in 2012.

Her rise is proof that the Tea Party remains a potent force after helping Republicans win control of the House of Representatives in November. REUTERS

Ousting Palin?

Her presence in the race could also dampen the chances that Sarah Palin will make a late entry into the campaign, since their messages resonate with the same conservative voters.

Mitt leads Michele, barely, in Iowa poll

Republican front-runner Mitt Romney and U.S. Rep. Michele Bachmann led a closely watched presidential poll of Iowa Republicans, the state that holds the first contest in the nomination battle.

The Iowa caucuses, often held on a frigid winter night that can limit turnout to those most committed, often serves to winnow the field of candidates.

Whoever captures the nomination in the unsettled Republican field is expected to challenge Democratic President Barack Obama in the November 2012 general election.

Romney led the poll of likely caucus-goers with 23 percent, followed by 22 percent support for Bachmann. REUTERS

Eliminate min. wage?

Rep. Michele Bachmann said she would stoke U.S. economic growth by cutting taxes on corporate income and capital gains and considering elimination of the minimum wage.

Corporate tax rates should be significantly reduced from a maximum 35 percent and capital gains taxes should be eliminated, Bachmann said in an interview on CBS's "Face the Nation" yesterday. Congress should also re-evaluate the federal minimum wage of $7.25 per hour, she said. REUTERS

New bond for Bond

It's time to play pop psychologist! On Saturday it was announced British actors Rachel Weisz, 41, and Daniel Craig, 43, married in New York City during a very private ceremony that only included Craig's teenage daughter Ella and Weisz's 5-year-old son. Rumor has it that the couple began "quietly dating" last year, shortly after Weisz announced the end of her nine-year relationship with "Black Swan" director Darren Aronofsky, with whom she had her son. (Random question: How do you date loudly?) Anyway, according to The Washington Post, this marriage comes shortly after "James Bond" star Craig ended a long-term engagement to producer Satsuki Mitchell.

Not to drag these accomplished actors down, but doesn't this seem kind of sudden? Like, their last long-term thing didn't work out and all of a sudden they're super eager to just jump into something serious immediately? Apparently they've been friends for years and had just recently starred as a couple in a film that has yet to come out — "Dream House." But if these were our old high school friends, we'd be tut-tutting this arrangement. Why not buy a summer home together and see where that goes? But then again, they may make too pretty a pair to pass up.

Talking points

Wilson and Duell split

Owen Wilson has reportedly split up with the mother of his child, Jade Duell, according to the National Enquirer. The pair have a son, Robert, who is 5 months old. "Owen wanted the freedom to do what he wanted with his friends, both male and female, while remaining a family unit with Jade and the baby," a source says. "But Jade wasn't willing to go along with that, so Owen decided to end things with her instead of cheating behind her back."

Jennifer Aniston has reportedly gotten her first tattoo, according to People magazine. Aniston has another dog, a German shepherd mix named Dolly.

▶ Clooney

"From what I know it was him who dumped her and she stormed out of the villa. 'Cars 2' drives home a box office win

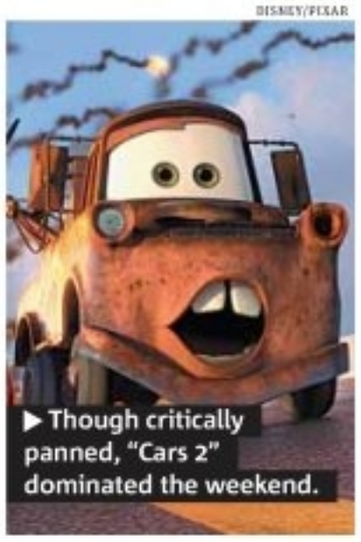
"Cars 2," a Pixar sequel judged by critics to be the worst movie produced by the Disney-owned animation studio, sped to the front of the pack at the weekend box office in North America.



DISNEY/PIXAR

▶ Though critically panned, "Cars 2" dominated the weekend.

According to studio estimates issued yesterday, the cartoon earned about $68 million during its first three days of release across the United States and Canada. The only other new release in the top 10, the Cameron Diaz comedy "Bad Teacher," opened at No. 2 with a better than expected $31 million. Last weekend's champion, the superhero film "Green Lantern," slid to No. 3 with $18.4 million.

Critics lambasted "Cars 2." The latest sequel, viewed more as a merchandising opportunity for Pixar's Walt Disney Co. parent than another creative milestone, received approval of 34 percent of critics surveyed by Rotten Tomatoes. The previous low for a Pixar film was 74 percent for the first "Cars." REUTERS

Russell Simmons, one of USA Today's 'Top 25 Most Influential People' offers up his get-ahead guidance

Job advice from Uncle Rush

GETTY IMAGES

▶ How does Russell Simmons define success? "Happiness. Needing nothing. Pure enlightenment," he says.

From his music label (Def Jam), to his fashion designs (Phat Farm), to his virtual banking services (the Rush Card), it seems that everything Russell Simmons touches turns to gold. At the 2011 American Business Awards, where Simmons was awarded the first-ever Difference Maker honor for his entrepreneurial and philanthropic contributions, we asked the mega-mogul to share some career advice. His No. 1 tip? "Love what you do," he says. Read on for more words of wisdom.

Quoted

"Operate from ease. Put your head down and do the work and forget the results."

RUSSELL'S ADVICE TO FUTURE MEDIA MOGULS

▶ Have an imagination: "I think it's important for American business to focus on creativity as opposed to quarterly results," the media mogul says. "American business needs creative people doing innovative things that make the world better."

▶ Be patient: "Everything I ever did took longer than it should have," he says. "I never did anything anybody liked."

▶ Fill a void: "My financial service company is changing the world. It's like the banks are starting to look to me like Tower Records and I'm starting to feel like iTunes. I see a whole new industry, a whole new way of managing money, and we started nine years ago and no one believed. People needed it. There was a big hole in the market: people getting their checks, going to check-cashing places, getting robbed. Then they couldn't rent anything; they were locked out of everything. They couldn't get a hotel room. And they were really locked out of the American dream. And now this virtual bank gives them the chance to shift that."

▶ Don't quit: "If you pick a path, stay on it," he says. "You don't fail until you quit. A lot of times you'll be a little bit shaken or you'll learn a lesson — that lesson should be incorporated into continued resilience. Faith is a critical part of the process."

▶ Remain motivated: "Have inspiring moments [and] keep looking for them," he says. "I'm inspired a lot when I see people who I started with become successful, people who I find I give just a little push and then they become some big success."

▶ Find spirituality: "That practice of being more connected comes through all different religious practices. The more you acknowledge it, the easier it is," he says.

Expert tip

Don't be greedy

"Neediness causes suffering. Getting rid of the neediness is a progress and you find more release and happiness as a result. Too many rich people are sad and suffering and full of anxiety, and there's some people who don't have a lot and are really happy and living a full life. No matter how big your mansion is, you can only sit your a— in one seat at a time."

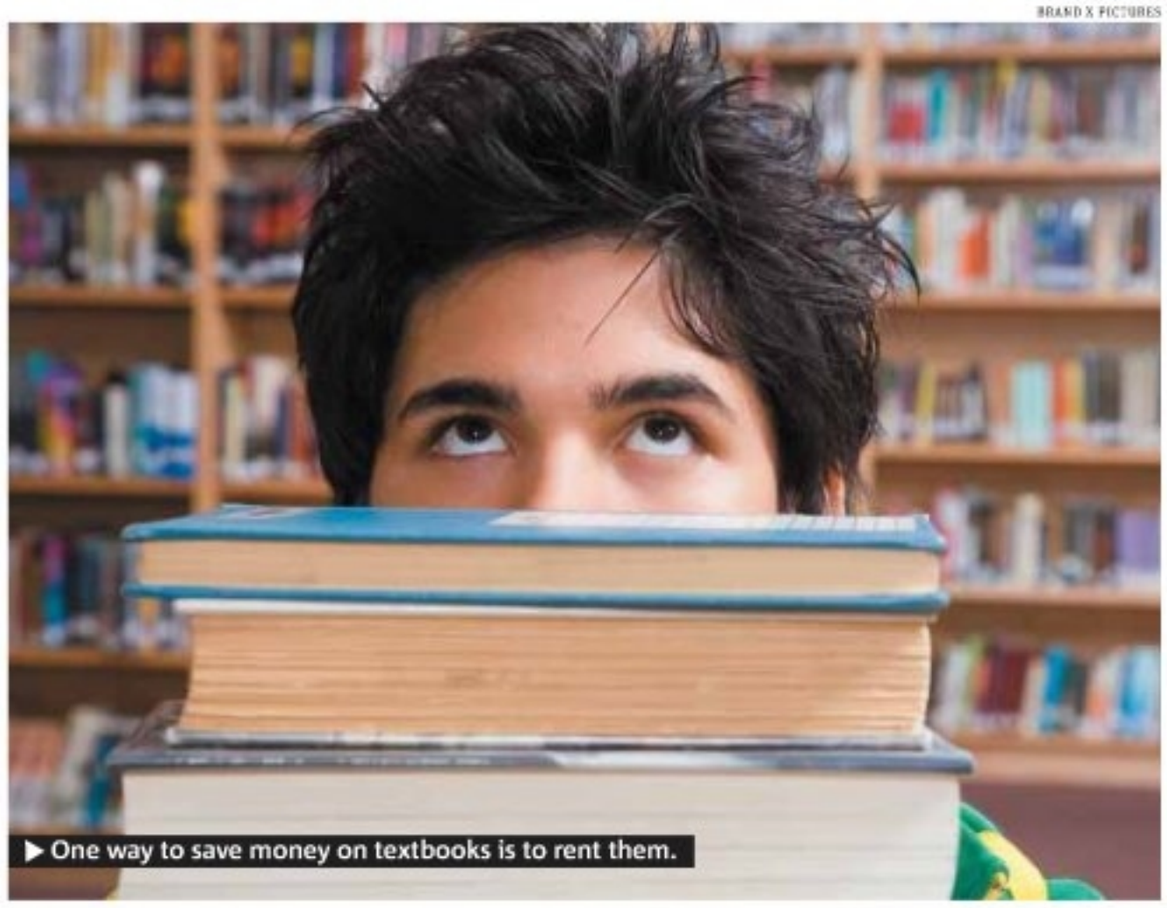
Textbook tyranny

BRAND X PICTURES



▶ One way to save money on textbooks is to rent them.

Economist James V. Koch of Old Dominion University in Virginia figured out that buying a textbook is not like a normal purchase, because the person selecting the item and the one paying for it are not the same person. With textbooks, the professor chooses the book, but the student has to shell out the money to acquire it.

This means that publishers can get away with setting excessively high prices, since the buyer is not in a position to say "too expensive" and walk away from the deal.

Koch analyzed the textbook market for a congressional committee five years ago, but talked to us about how the market has — and hasn't — changed.

"There's a lot more awareness of the problem," Koch said, "and more efforts to provide alternatives" such as textbook rentals.

The other big change is the increasing role of the Internet. "There's a significant element of competition now," Koch said. "It's much easier for students to compare prices and find the best deals."

Not all changes are for the better. Publishers have responded to reform efforts by putting out new editions of textbooks even more often. A few years ago the average was a new edition every three and a half years; it's now every three years. Once a new edition comes out, it can be impossible to sell back your book at the end of the semester, or to find a used copy yourself.

Education Option.com

JUDY WEIGHTMAN
JUDY.WEIGHTMAN@METRO.US

Study guide

Koch's money saving tips:

- Comparison shop. Look around for the best price possible, and consider renting instead of buying.
- Buy used!
- Ask the professor if you can use an older edition of the text, which will be much cheaper.
- Advocate for change. Work with your student government to educate professors and other students about the issues.

The ever-changing demand of IT needs

As virtual operating systems change, so do the needs of companies Learn to fix the 'blue screen of death'

Last year, Network World magazine named Virtual Systems Manager the second "best IT job right now."

But "right now" can become ancient history really fast in the IT profession.

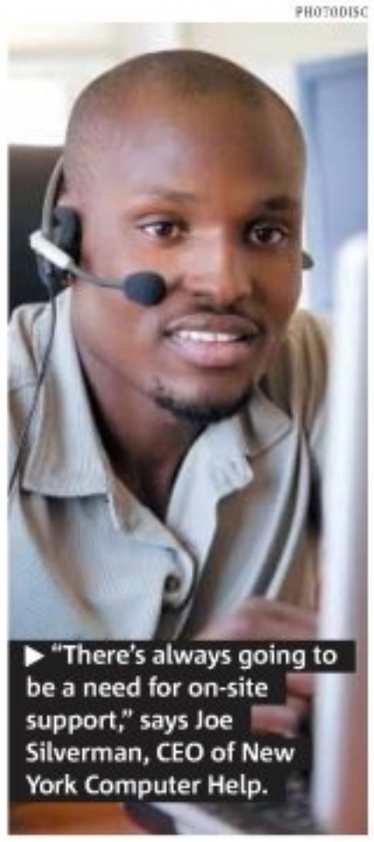
A virtual operating system is a platform upon which businesses can link their computers and operate out of one, virtualized, operating system. But as the cloud becomes more trusted, and these virtual systems become more centralized and outsourced, there may be less demand for virtual systems managers.

"Businesses with five to 10 people are using the cloud servers now," says Joe Silverman, CEO of New York Computer Help, a company that provides IT to other companies and designs virtual systems for them. "I find that bigger companies that have a server feel like, 'Hey, we have this big investment, let's make it work for us.' But even with big companies, there's a shift. They're migrating over to the cloud."

And companies are finding they still need a real person for their computers.

"Virtualization is the lazy man's IT. It's a chance to double up your return on your existing IT," says Silverman. "But 'blue screen of death' and hard drive failure, that's where real IT talent comes through. There's always going to be a need for on-site support."

PHOTODISC



▶ "There's always going to be a need for on-site support," says Joe Silverman, CEO of New York Computer Help.

In defense of Lindsay Lohan

In the case of Lindsay Lohan, I doubt we know her history. There are a lot of people with demons who aren't constantly examined in the public eye. Instead of holding a witch hunt, we should help Lindsay get better. It shouldn't matter how many times she falls, but how many times we help her up.

MAURICIO ESTARELLAS, VIA E-MAIL

Rest in peace, Peter Falk

Let's take a break from gay rights, the debt ceiling, war, and liberal/conservative bickering. It sure was a bummer to hear of the passing of "Columbo," i.e. Peter Falk. Rest in peace.

JOHN E. BEVAN, PHILADELPHIA

Adding insult to injury

A letter writer recently called another writer a "chauvinist pig" for criticizing a singer's weight. I suggest we stop insulting other species. When's the last time you referred to yourself as having pigged out, chickened or weaseled out of something, or called someone a dog, a snake, a dirty rat or a fat cow. None of the connotations are positive. We use these phrases without thinking but they penetrate our thoughts nonetheless. We make it easier to ignore the needs of other species.

ROSA MICHNYA, PHILADELPHIA

When social outreach fails

RE: 'DRUG WAR' NOT ROCKET SCIENCE: The legalization of drugs may work quite well for pot but to keep people on crack, meth or heroine in "supportive community programs" isn't going to work. We pump billions of dollars into our schools, but many kids don't want to learn; many end up in jail. If it's a poverty-driven problem, why do the poor waste money on drugs and not food?

JOHN ARSLANIAN, WARMINSTER, PA

Something up his sleeve

President Obama was a step ahead of his supporters and is being vilified for it. Activists are condemning him for not taking a position on gay marriage when the New York Senate was taking its vote. Does anyone believe that the Republicans would have allowed a vote if Obama had come out in favor? Let's give Obama credit for knowing to keeping his mouth shut when one word may have killed the gay marriage bill.

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Your wit and humor can be quite good at times, but making another the butt of your joke may not be a laughing matter to your victim.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Be on guard when negotiating a complicated matter. There is a strong chance that someone is not leveling with you and failing to put all his or her cards on the table.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Just because your spirits are high doesn't mean someone won't come along and try to put a damper on them. Make light of anything negative this person has to say.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Sometimes there can be a thin line between assertiveness and aggressiveness. Be careful that you know the difference.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. It's important to logically, not emotionally, evaluate a business matter if you hope to accurately assess both its values and frailties. Don't act on a whim or a prayer.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Regardless of how well you know somebody, carefully lay out in detail all the important facts before entering into a pricey agreement.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Starting the week off full of big ideas is great, but having what it takes to follow through on anyone of them is another story. Don't start anything that you know you won't finish.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Trying to pretend you're knowledgeable about something, when in fact you know bubkes, will turn out to be an embarrassment when you have to prove it.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. It's nice to have someone do you a favor, but remember you need to credit this person and show him or her an appreciation for the effort. Strive to acknowledge the individual in some way.

Weekend wrap

New center of attention

With Mike Richards and Jeff Carter gone, the Flyers drafted whom they hope is the next great center.

The Flyers used the No. 8 pick in last Friday's draft on Sean Couturier, an 18-year-old center once ranked the top overall North American-born skater.

East Coast bias? Hamels happy in South Philly

Ace southpaw turning in career year Will Phillies offer him megadeal? Or will he cash in elsewhere?

Cole Hamels will be part of Maxim's forthcoming 'The Man' issue. The title is apt since Hamels has been just that this season.

The polished southpaw is among the league leaders in most categories. To put his accomplishments in perspective, compare King Cole to the perceived best pitcher in baseball, teammate Roy Halladay.

In their first 16 starts, they each had nine wins. But Hamels had given up 16 fewer hits (86) and one less homer (six), while striking out 108.

Hamels, 27, is arguably the best pitcher in baseball since last season's All-Star break. And the 2008 NLCS and World Series MVP has picked a good time to come of age. Hamels is eligible for arbitration after this season and free agency following the 2012 campaign.

It's not easy to figure out what Hamels will do since the door to his baseball thoughts has closed considerably over the last two seasons. Hamels has been much more guarded with his comments following quotes taken out of context during the 2009 World Series.

"I can 't wait for it [the season] to end," Hamels said. "It's been mentally draining."

Hamels went on to say how much he wanted to redeem himself in Game 7 of that series. Many scribes failed to note the latter.

But the questions remain: Where will Hamels go? Will the Phillies sign their youngest ace to a megadeal before he hits the free-agent market?

Hamels recently waxed about his hometown, San Diego, for Maxim. When asked in 2009 about his preferred destination, the pitcher delivered some surprising commentary.

"You know I would rather not go back there [San Diego]," Hamels said. "I would like to continue to pitch for the Phillies. I prefer to pitch on the East Coast. The fans in this part of the country know the game and are passionate about it. It's a great atmosphere to pitch in."

ED CONDRAN

Deal with it

If there have been any contract talks, the Phillies and Hamels are keeping it quiet. Here's how his current deal looks:

- 2010 season: $6.65 mil
  Would get $500,000 bonus for winning Cy Young
- 2011 season: $9.5 mil
  Arbitration-eligible after 2011. Can't file for free agency until after 2012.
- 2013 season?
  At age 29, Hamels will be one of the youngest arms on a free agent market that will include: Matt Cain (28), Gavin Floyd (30), Dan Haren (32), Jered Weaver (30) and Tim Hudson (37).

Mwanga, Union still tops in East

That's why you play 90 minutes.

After a lackluster first half left the crowd booing, the Union stormed back and grabbed a 3-2 victory over Chivas USA on Saturday at PPL Park.

Danny Mwanga tallied the game-winner in the 82nd minute, breaking a 2-2 tie and keeping the club perfect at home — with a 5-0-4 mark — this season.

The Union are 7-4-5 overall, two points (26) ahead of New York for first place in the Eastern Conference.

"This team doesn't stop fighting," said Mwanga, who leads the Union with five goals. "We had so many [missed] chances and we were still fighting."

The Union hit the road for three matches, starting Saturday in D.C. METRO

Oakland, just what the Doctor ordered

Halladay throws complete-game gem ◗ Phillies beat Athletics, 3-1 ◗ Rollins fuels offense ◗ Boston on deck

When Roy Halladay takes the mound, the Phillies usually win.

The Phillies ace earned his 10th victory yesterday and fifth complete game in a 3-1 win over Oakland.

Halladay (10-3) surrendered one run on eight hits, while raising his NL-leading strikeout tally to 123. The Phillies are undefeated in Halladay's last eight starts, with the right-hander going 5-0 with a 2.64 ERA in that stretch.

While Doc was rolling on the hill, Jimmy Rollins busted out of a season-long slump, going 4-for-4 with two runs scored. Rollins' last four-hit game was back on May 21, 2009.

"I guess he was due," Phillies skipper Charlie Manuel joked.

The Phillies (49-30) are off today before welcoming Boston to town for a three-game set — and possible World Series preview. The Red Sox (45-32) are a half-game behind the N.Y. Yankees in the AL East.

Ford slips, Toyota gains in rankings

Influential list of how automakers stack up had big shuffle from last year's rankings Survey found Americans had fewest problems with Toyota's Lexus

Trouble with new technologies including a clunky control system for its radios pounded Ford Motor Co.'s ranking in a closely watched quality ranking, just a year after the U.S. brand led its mass-market rivals.

In a reversal of fortune, Japanese automaker Toyota Motor Corp.'s namesake brand, which last year tumbled to its lowest ranking ever due to a series of damaging recalls, pulled off a corresponding rebound, according to the influential study of U.S. consumers released on Thursday by J.D. Power and Associates.

Ford, the only U.S. automaker to avoid bankruptcy and a government bailout, saw its namesake brand slide to 23rd — its lowest spot in a decade, down from fifth place last year, which represented, its highest ranking ever. Toyota rebounded to seventh from 21st last year.

"Ford is on the leading edge, certainly in the mass market, of trying to bring new technology into the vehicles," said David Sargent, J.D. Power's vice president of global vehicle research. "With that comes some risk that there will be unforeseen problems and that's exactly what happened."

Toyota's Lexus luxury brand captured the top spot, moving up from fourth last year.

How they ranked

The widely watched J.D. Power and Associates U.S. Initial Quality Study, which records difficulties faced by new car owners in the first 90 days of ownership, found that overall quality of autos sold in the United States hit its highest level in 2011 in the survey's 25-year history. The survey ranks brands by the number of problems reported per 100 vehicles sold — the industry's average stood at 107 for the year, down from 109 last year.

Problems per 100 vehicles:

1. Lexus 73
2. Honda 86
3. Acura 89
4. Mercedes-Benz 94
5 (tie). Mazda/Porsche 100
7. Toyota 101
8. Infiniti 102

Chrysler sees chance in China

Automaker wants to go from 127 dealerships in Asian country to 177 in next three years Company to push brands, including Jeep, in markets outside US

Chrysler Group LLC, the U.S. automaker operated by Fiat SpA, wants to expand its dealer network in China by 39 percent over the next two to three years.

The automaker has 127 dealerships covering about 60 percent of the market in China, Mike Manley, head of Chrysler's international operations, said. He wants to add 50 within two to three years and hopes to double the number in more than five years, he said.

"There are still big chunks of the market that we don't have dealerships in," Manley told reporters at a Chrysler event in Chelsea, Mich. "We need to expand and grow."

Chrysler Group LLC's current coverage in the Chinese auto market.

The effort is part of Chrysler's drive to increase the automaker's Chrysler and Jeep brands outside North America. Auburn Hills, Mich.-based Chrysler Group's sales outside the continent in May rose 17 percent compared with the same month last year, Chrysler has said.

Jeep sales outside North America rose 50 percent in May, helped by completion of a dealer restructuring in Europe, Manley said. Europe sales should continue to grow this year now that new franchise contracts have been signed, he said.

"Advanced dealer orders on Grand Cherokee and Compass have been phenomenal," he said. "I think we're set for a good September."
